How to use this pack

Five habits that turn any of these 100 prompts from a novelty into your daily workflow.

This pack is a working toolkit, not a book about AI. Every prompt is written for the specific job an Indian wedding and event planner does - replying to a WhatsApp enquiry, building a proposal, costing a 400-guest wedding with GST, briefing a decorator, running the wedding day, and filling next season. You paste a prompt into ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini or any modern assistant, fill in the square brackets, and edit the result. Nothing here needs any technical skill.

Two things make the difference between AI output you can send to a client and AI output that reads like a template. The first is giving the assistant your business context. The second is the five habits below. Read them once now; they are the reason the other 100 prompts work.

- 1. Paste your Master Context first. Every prompt in this pack assumes the AI already knows your business. Paste the Master Context block at the top of a new chat, then paste the prompt. This one habit is the difference between generic output and output you can send as-is.
- 2. Give a role, the facts, and the format. Tell the AI who to be ('act as a senior wedding producer'), give it the real facts of this event, and state the output format (a WhatsApp message under 120 words, a table, a bullet list). Skip any one of the three and the output drifts.
- 3. Always ask for three options. Ask for three versions of any client-facing message - one warm, one short, one formal - then pick and edit. Your first instinct is rarely the best wording, and asking is free.
- 4. Never let it invent a price, date or vendor name. AI will confidently make up a per-plate rate or a muhurat window. Put 'do not invent any price, date or vendor name - mark unknowns as [confirm]' inside the prompt. Then verify every number yourself.
- 5. Edit before you send. Your name is on it. The AI writes the first draft; you write the final one. Read every message aloud once before it goes to a client. That single pass catches 90% of what makes AI writing feel cold.

Your Master Context - paste this first, every time

Copy the block below into a note on your phone or a document. Paste it at the top of a new chat before you paste any prompt in this pack. Update the brackets once, then reuse it all season.

> My business: I am [your name], an independent wedding and event planner based in [your city].
> I plan [weddings / corporate events / both] for clients in [your market: e.g. middle and upper-middle income families in Nagpur, 150-400 guests, budgets of Rs. 8-25 lakh].
> My services: [full planning / decor plus coordination / on-the-day management / destination events].
> My tone with clients: warm, calm, organised and never pushy.
> I bill in Indian Rupees. My quotes are [inclusive of / exclusive of] 18% GST.
> Today's date is [date]. When you draft anything for me: use Indian English, keep it WhatsApp-friendly unless I say otherwise, never invent a price, date or vendor name, and mark anything you do not know as [confirm]. Always give me the output in the exact format I ask for.

A note on honesty: AI will confidently invent a per-plate rate, a vendor name or a muhurat window that does not exist. Every prompt here tells the assistant not to - but you are still the one who signs the contract. Verify every number, date and name before it reaches a client.

Read this pack in the order you work. If you are new to using AI, start with Part 1 and the Master Context block on the previous page, then work through the parts in sequence. If you are already using AI daily, go straight to the part that matches the job in front of you today.

Part 1 - Enquiry and First Reply

The first reply decides whether the enquiry becomes a booking. Speed and warmth win more weddings than price.

1 · The 60-second enquiry reply

Use when: A new enquiry lands on WhatsApp or Instagram. Use this before you do anything else.

> Act as a calm, senior wedding planner replying on WhatsApp. A new enquiry has come in: [paste the enquiry exactly as the client wrote it]. My business details are above. Write a reply under 90 words that (1) thanks them warmly and uses their name, (2) answers the one question they actually asked, (3) asks for the two facts I need to help - the event date and the city, and (4) offers a 15-minute call with two specific time slots. No emojis except one, no sales pressure, no price yet. Indian English.

2 · Instagram DM to booked call in three messages

Use when: Turn a curious DM into a real conversation without sounding like a brochure.

> Act as a wedding planner. A prospect has messaged me on Instagram asking 'do you do weddings in [city]?'. Write a three-message sequence I can send over 48 hours. Message 1: warm reply plus one specific question. Message 2 (next day): one useful thing - a tip about their season or venue - with no ask. Message 3 (day after): a soft invitation to a 15-minute call. Each message under 70 words, natural Indian English, no emojis in messages 2 and 3.

3 · When the first question is 'kitna lagega?'

Use when: Price-first enquiries. Answer honestly without killing the conversation.

> Act as a wedding planner who does not quote blind. A prospect's first message is 'kitna lagega for a full wedding?'. My business details are above. Write a WhatsApp reply under 100 words that (1) says plainly that the honest answer depends on three things - guest count, city and how much I handle - (2) gives one real illustrative range for my market so I do not look evasive, (3) names those three things, and (4) asks for the date and guest count. Warm, confident, zero apology.

4 · The 'we are just exploring' enquiry

Use when: They are 12 months out and not ready. Stay useful, stay top of mind.

> Act as a wedding planner. A prospect says they are 'just exploring, wedding is [X] months away'. Write a reply under 110 words that (1) says that is exactly the right time to start and why in one line, (2) gives them one genuinely useful free thing - a date-planning tip for their season, (3) offers to send a one-page 'how to start planning' note, and (4) does not push a call. End with a light question so the thread stays alive.

5 · Enquiry reply in Hinglish

Use when: For clients who message in Hinglish, reply in their language.

> Act as a wedding planner. A prospect wrote: [paste their Hinglish message]. Write a reply in friendly Hinglish (Hindi written in English letters) mixed naturally with English wedding words, under 90 words. Thank them, answer their point, and ask for the date and city. Keep it warm and respectful - use 'aap', not 'tum'. Do not overdo the Hindi; keep it how a professional from [city] would actually type on WhatsApp.

6 · Out-of-town and destination enquiry reply

Use when: Destination enquiries need different questions.

> Act as a destination wedding planner. A prospect from [city] is asking about a wedding in [destination]. Write a reply under 120 words that (1) confirms I work there and in which seasons, (2) asks the four facts that matter for destination work - dates, guest count, how many functions, and who is paying for guest stay, and (3) explains in one line that destination planning starts with a site visit. Warm and confident.

7 · Referral enquiry - thank the referrer properly

Use when: A past client sent them. Acknowledge it and it converts faster.

> Act as a wedding planner. [Name] has enquired and mentioned that [referrer name], a past client, recommended me. Write a WhatsApp reply under 100 words that (1) warmly thanks them for coming through [referrer name], (2) says I will take special care because of who sent them - without overpromising, (3) asks for date, city and guest count, and (4) offers a call. Then write a separate one-line thank-you message I can send to [referrer name].

8 · Corporate and offsite enquiry reply

Use when: Different buyer, different language. Drop the wedding tone.

> Act as a corporate event manager. A company's HR or admin team has enquired about [event type: annual day / offsite / product launch / conference] for [X] people in [city]. Write a reply under 130 words that (1) acknowledges the brief, (2) asks for the four facts - date, headcount, budget range and whether it is on a weekday, (3) mentions GST-compliant invoicing in one line because that matters to them, and (4) proposes a 20-minute call. Formal but human.

9 · When you are already booked on their date

Use when: How to say no and still win the referral.

> Act as a wedding planner. I am already booked on [date]. A prospect wants exactly that date. Write a reply under 110 words that (1) is honest immediately, (2) offers two real alternatives - another good date within their season, or the name of a trusted planner colleague I can vouch for, and (3) leaves the door open warmly. No vague 'let me check and get back'. Give one clear answer.

10 · Follow-up when an enquiry goes quiet

Use when: One follow-up, not five. Make it useful.

> Act as a wedding planner. I replied to [name] about their [date] wedding [X] days ago and there has been no response. Write a single follow-up WhatsApp message under 70 words that (1) does not say 'just following up', (2) adds one new piece of value - for example that [date] is one of the busiest in the season and good venues go first, and (3) makes replying easy with a one-line question. If they do not reply, I will send one final message in 10 days - draft that one line too.

Part 2 - Qualification and Consultation

Good planning starts with good questions. These prompts turn a vague enquiry into a brief you can quote against.

11 · The pre-call questionnaire

Use when: Send this before the first meeting so the call is about decisions, not data collection.

> Act as a senior wedding planner. Draft a pre-consultation questionnaire I can send to a couple before our first call. Group it into: the couple, the families, dates and muhurat, city and venue, guest count, functions planned, budget range, and what they most want help with. Maximum 20 questions, each one line, friendly tone, no jargon. Add a one-line intro explaining why I am asking. Output as a numbered list.

12 · The 45-minute discovery call agenda

Use when: A tight agenda makes you look organised and keeps the call on time.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a 45-minute discovery call agenda for a couple planning a [type] wedding of [X] guests in [city] on [date]. Split the 45 minutes into time blocks with a purpose for each. Include the three questions I must get answered before I can quote, and one closing block where I explain next steps and fees. Output as a simple table: Minutes, Topic, What I need to learn.

13 · Opening the budget conversation without fear

Use when: Most planners avoid this. Asking early saves weeks.

> Act as a wedding planner who is comfortable talking money. Write a short script (under 120 words, spoken tone) for asking a couple about their budget in the first call. It should (1) normalise the question, (2) give three broad brackets so they can point rather than guess, and (3) explain in one line why knowing early helps them. Then give three calm follow-ups for if they dodge the question.

14 · The guest-count reality check

Use when: Guest count is the single biggest cost driver. Help them see it.

> Act as a wedding planner. A couple wants a '[large / small]' wedding but keeps changing the number. Write a short, kind explanation (under 150 words) that shows how guest count drives cost - per-plate, seating, decor, invitations, transport, rooms - using a simple illustrative example in Rupees for my market. End with a suggested way to fix a working number. Then write the two-line WhatsApp version I can send them.

15 · Mapping who actually decides

Use when: In Indian weddings the couple often is not the only decision-maker.

> Act as an experienced Indian wedding planner. Help me map the decision-making structure for this client: [describe the family - who is paying, who is hosting, who is vocal, who the couple is]. Give me (1) a simple map of who decides what, (2) the three questions that reveal hidden decision-makers, and (3) a one-line way to politely bring the real decision-maker into the next call without offending anyone.

16 · Turn messy voice notes into a brief

Use when: Families send 9-minute voice notes. Convert them into a clean brief.

> Act as a wedding planner. Below are the client's requirements as they gave them to me - a mix of voice notes and messages. Convert this into a clean one-page event brief with sections: Event, Date and time, Venue, Guest count, Functions, Must-haves, Nice-to-haves, Open questions, and Budget signals. Keep only what the client actually said; put anything missing under Open questions. Client input: [paste everything].

17 · The venue shortlist question set

Use when: The right questions stop a bad venue from ruining the day.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the questions I should ask (and get in writing) when shortlisting a venue for a [X]-guest [wedding / corporate event] in [city]. Cover: capacity and layout, in-house vs outside catering, per-plate rates and taxes, decor and DJ restrictions, timings and loudspeaker rules, parking, power backup, changing rooms, alcohol policy, cancellation terms, and the deposit. Output as a checklist I can tick during a site visit. Maximum 25 questions.

18 · Must-have versus nice-to-have triage

Use when: When the wishlist and the budget do not meet.

> Act as a wedding planner. Here is the client's wishlist: [paste]. Their realistic budget is Rs. [X]. Sort every item into Must-have, Nice-to-have and Drop, and for each Must-have suggest a lower-cost way to deliver the same feeling. Then write a short, non-judgemental message I can send the couple explaining what fits and what does not, ending with two choices rather than a lecture.

19 · When a competitor quotes half your price

Use when: Answer without insulting anyone.

> Act as a wedding planner. A prospect says another planner has quoted 'almost half' my price for what sounds like the same scope. Write a reply (under 140 words) that (1) does not criticise the other planner, (2) lists the three or four things that usually explain a price gap in this market - what is excluded, how many staff, who is on site on the day, vendor quality - and (3) invites them to compare scopes line by line. Confident, never defensive.

20 · The 24-hour post-call recap

Use when: Recap the call in writing. It builds trust and prevents disputes.

> Act as a wedding planner. After my call with [name] about their [date] wedding, write a recap message I can send within 24 hours. Structure: what we discussed, what we agreed, what I will do next and by when, what I need from them, and the date of our next call. Under 180 words, warm and crisp, WhatsApp-friendly. Use these call notes: [paste your notes].

Part 3 - Proposal and Concept Note

A proposal is not a price list. It is the moment a couple decides whether they trust you with their day.

21 · The full proposal skeleton

Use when: The structure every serious wedding proposal should follow.

> Act as a senior wedding planner. Build the full section-by-section skeleton of a wedding proposal for a [X]-guest [type] wedding in [city] on [date], budget Rs. [X]. Include: cover note, about us, understanding of the brief, concept, scope of services, timeline of deliverables, team, investment options, what is not included, terms and next steps. For each section write one line on what it must achieve. Output as a table: Section, Purpose, Roughly how long.

22 · Writing the concept narrative

Use when: Turn a mood and a colour into a story the couple can feel.

> Act as a wedding designer and writer. Using this brief: [paste the couple's brief, functions, colours, likes and dislikes], write a 250-word concept narrative for their wedding. It should read like a story of the day, move through each function, and name colours, textures, flowers, light and sound in plain language. Warm and specific, no cliches like 'a fairytale come true'. End with a one-line theme name.

23 · Designing three package tiers

Use when: Give the couple a choice, not a single number.

> Act as a wedding planner. Design three service tiers for a [X]-guest wedding in [city]: Essential, Signature and Full Service. For each tier list what is included, what is not, the number of on-site team members on the wedding day, and how many planning meetings. Then write one line per tier explaining who it suits. Use my market rates: [your fee range]. Output as a comparison table.

24 · The scope and exclusions page

Use when: Most disputes come from what was never written down.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a clear 'What is included and what is not included' page for a proposal. On the included side, list planning, vendor coordination, design, on-the-day management and the number of functions covered. On the excluded side, list everything a couple commonly assumes is included but usually is not - vendor payments, GST, venue charges, guest transport, alcohol, gifts, honeymoon, out-of-city travel and stay for my team. Plain English, no legalese, under 200 words.

25 · Timeline of deliverables

Use when: Show them exactly what happens and when.

> Act as a wedding planner. Create a timeline of deliverables for a wedding on [date], starting [X] months before. List each milestone - kickoff, budget lock, venue booking, vendor confirmations, design sign-off, final guest count, run-of-show, wedding week - with the month it happens, what I deliver, and what the client must decide. Output as a table. Then write the two-line version for WhatsApp.

26 · Team and responsibilities page

Use when: Reassure them about who is actually on the ground.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a 'Your team' page for a proposal. Explain the roles: lead planner, design lead, on-site coordinator, vendor manager, and the number of crew on the wedding day. For each role give one line on what they do and who the couple should contact for what. Keep it human - no job-description language. Under 180 words.

27 · Destination wedding proposal

Use when: Destination proposals must answer the fear of distance.

> Act as a destination wedding planner. Write the opening section of a proposal for a wedding at [destination] for [X] guests across [number] functions. Address directly: site visits, local vendor network, guest logistics and stay, weather and season risk, travel for my team, and how decisions get made remotely. Under 300 words, calm and specific. Then list the five questions I must ask before quoting.

28 · Corporate event proposal

Use when: Corporate buyers want outcomes, not decoration.

> Act as a corporate event manager. Write a proposal for [event type] for [company] - [X] attendees, [city], [date], budget Rs. [X]. Lead with the business objective, then the experience, then logistics, then measurement (what the client will be able to report afterwards). Include a compliance line: GST-compliant invoice, SAC 998596, and a named single point of contact. Under 350 words, professional and concrete.

29 · The one-page proposal for WhatsApp

Use when: Most couples will read this version first.

> Act as a wedding planner. Condense this full proposal into a single WhatsApp message a couple can read in 60 seconds: [paste the proposal or key points]. Structure: what we understood, what we will do, what it costs (range), what happens next. Under 180 words, use short lines, no attachments needed. End with one clear question.

30 · The proposal cover note

Use when: The first paragraph decides whether they read the rest.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a cover note to open a proposal for [couple names]'s wedding on [date] in [city]. It should (1) refer to one specific thing they said in our meeting so they know this is not a template, (2) state in one line what makes my approach right for them, and (3) tell them exactly what to do next. Under 150 words, warm and confident.

Part 4 - Budget, Quote and Pricing

Numbers, GST and the courage to charge properly. Verified for FY 2026-27.

31 · Allocating the budget across heads

Use when: Show a couple where the money actually goes.

> Act as a wedding planner. For a [X]-guest wedding in [city] with a total budget of Rs. [X], build an indicative allocation across heads: venue, catering, decor, photography and video, makeup and styling, outfits and jewellery, entertainment, invitations and stationery, transport, guest stay, rituals and puja, and my planning fee. Give each head a Rupee range that adds up to the total, with one line on what drives the cost in that head. Output as a table with a total row.

32 · The cost sheet builder

Use when: Your internal costing sheet, structured once and reused.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a cost-sheet template for a [type] wedding with [X] guests. Columns: Item, Vendor, Quantity, Unit rate, Subtotal, GST rate, GST amount, Total, Advance paid, Balance, Notes. Fill in the row structure for the usual heads and leave the numbers as blanks. Then tell me the three rows where planners most often forget to add a cost. Output as a table.

33 · Per-plate versus lump-sum comparison

Use when: Help a client see which catering structure is cheaper for them.

> Act as a wedding planner. A couple is comparing a per-plate caterer with a lump-sum quote. Using these figures - per-plate Rs. [X] for [Y] plates guaranteed, versus a lump sum of Rs. [Z] - build a comparison that shows the break-even guest count, what happens if fewer guests attend, and what is usually excluded in each (live counters, service staff, crockery, GST). Explain it in under 200 words a non-accountant can follow.

34 · Writing a quote that is GST-correct

Use when: 18% GST, SAC 998596 - get it right on the invoice.

> Act as an event business owner in India. Write a sample quote line structure for a wedding planning package of Rs. [X] for a client in [state]. Show: my professional fee, any pass-through vendor costs, the applicable GST at 18% under SAC 998596, and the grand total. Add a short note explaining that the place of supply is where the event is held, so an event in another state attracts IGST. Keep it to a table plus four explanatory lines.

35 · The payment milestone schedule

Use when: Protect your cash flow and your client's comfort.

> Act as a wedding planner. Design a payment schedule for a wedding on [date] with a total fee of Rs. [X]. Split it into milestones - booking advance, design sign-off, [X] days before, wedding week, and final settlement after the event. Give each milestone a percentage and what it is tied to. Then write the two-line version explaining it to a client who asks to pay 'mostly at the end'.

36 · The contingency buffer conversation

Use when: The 10% nobody budgets for.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a short, friendly explanation (under 160 words) of why a couple should keep a contingency of about 10% of their budget untouched. Give three real examples of what it covers - a last-minute guest increase, a vendor price revision, a weather backup. Then write the one-line version I can put in a proposal without sounding like I am padding my own bill.

37 · Justifying your planning fee

Use when: When a client asks 'why am I paying you this much?'

> Act as a wedding planner. A client questions my planning fee of Rs. [X]. Write a reply (under 180 words) that frames the fee against the value: hours of coordination across [X] months, the vendor discounts I negotiate, the risks I remove, and the fact that they get to be a guest at their own wedding. Never apologetic, never comparing myself to a 'free' relative. End by offering to walk through exactly what the fee covers.

38 · The add-on menu

Use when: Grow the booking without pushing.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a short add-on menu I can offer existing clients: things like guest management, welcome hampers, mehndi coordination, sangeet choreography management, honeymoon concierge, and post-wedding thank-you logistics. For each: one line on what it is and an indicative Rupee price for my market. Then write a soft message offering it, under 80 words.

39 · Responding to a discount request

Use when: Say no, or trade - never just cut.

> Act as a wedding planner. A client asks for a discount of [X]% on my fee. Write a reply (under 150 words) that (1) thanks them for being direct, (2) explains plainly that my fee is not the flexible part of their budget, (3) offers a real alternative - trimming scope, moving to a lighter package, or a small saving on a specific line - and (4) keeps the relationship warm. Give me three versions: hold, trade, and walk away.

40 · Cost-saving swaps that do not show

Use when: Save the client money without cheapening the day.

> Act as a wedding designer. For a [X]-guest wedding with a budget of Rs. [X], suggest 10 swaps that reduce cost without the guests noticing - for example, seasonal flowers, printed versus digital invitations, a smaller live band plus a DJ, decor reuse across functions, and a smarter seating plan. For each, give the swap, the rough saving, and the risk to watch. Output as a table.

Part 5 - Vendor Sourcing, RFP and Negotiation

Your vendors are your reputation. These prompts make you the most organised client they have.

41 · The vendor requirement brief (RFP)

Use when: Send the same brief to every vendor. Compare fairly.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a request for proposal (RFP) I can send to [vendor type] for a [X]-guest [function] in [city] on [date]. Include: event overview, exact deliverable, date and timing, location, my budget band, what they must include in their reply (price with GST, inclusions, exclusions, team size, references), and my reply deadline. Under 300 words, professional, one page. End with a line telling them what happens next.

42 · The vendor comparison matrix

Use when: Ten quotes, one table, one decision.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a comparison matrix for [X] [vendor type] quotes. Rows: vendor name, total price, price with GST, inclusions, exclusions, team size, references checked, availability on my date, insurance or backup, gut feeling. Then tell me how to score them and which three criteria should carry the most weight for this event type: [wedding / corporate]. Output as a blank table I can fill, plus a short scoring guide.

43 · Photographer RFP and questions

Use when: Photography is the only thing that outlives the day.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the questions I must ask a wedding photographer before booking, and the RFP I send them for a [X]-day, [Y]-function wedding in [city]. Cover: number of shooters, hours covered, deliverables and delivery time, editing style, raw files policy, backup equipment, album and print rights, travel and stay, advance and cancellation, and GST. Then list the five red flags in a photographer's reply.

44 · Decorator RFP and design sign-off

Use when: Decor goes wrong when the brief is vague.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a decorator RFP and a design sign-off checklist for [X] functions in [city]. The RFP must ask for a mood board, a 3D or rendered view of the main stage, a full flower and fabric list, a setup and teardown timeline, a crew count, and a written rate with GST. The sign-off checklist must cover what the client approves and by when, and what happens if a flower is unavailable.

45 · Caterer RFP and tasting questions

Use when: The tasting is a negotiation, not a party.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a caterer RFP for a [X]-guest [veg / non-veg / mixed] wedding in [city] on [date]. Ask for: menu with per-plate rates, live counters, service staff ratio, crockery and cutlery, kitchen setup and power needs, tasting date, food safety and FSSAI licence, leftovers policy, and GST. Then write the 10 questions I should ask during the tasting itself, including the three that reveal hidden charges.

46 · Makeup artist RFP and trial plan

Use when: Book the trial before the season fills up.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a brief and question list for booking makeup artists for a [X]-function wedding. Cover: looks needed, number of artists, travel and stay, trial policy and price, product brands, hygiene, timing per look, and a plan for the wedding morning that keeps everyone on schedule. Then write the message I send to confirm a trial, under 80 words.

47 · The polite but firm negotiation script

Use when: Ask for better terms without damaging the relationship.

> Act as a wedding planner negotiating with a vendor. I want to bring [vendor]'s quote of Rs. [X] closer to Rs. [Y], or get [specific term - extra hour, free trial, faster delivery] without paying more. Write a short spoken script (under 130 words) that is respectful, specific about what I am asking for, and offers something in return - a confirmed booking, a repeat reference, or a faster payment. Then give three fallback asks.

48 · The vendor confirmation message

Use when: Lock every detail in writing the same day.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the confirmation message I send to [vendor] once we agree terms. It must restate: the event and date, the exact deliverable, the price with GST, the advance amount and date, the balance terms, the setup and teardown timing, and the named contact on both sides. Under 180 words. End by asking them to reply 'confirmed' so we both have it in writing.

49 · The vendor backup plan

Use when: One vendor failure can sink a wedding. Plan for it.

> Act as a wedding planner. For a [X]-guest wedding with these vendors confirmed: [list vendors], identify the three most likely failure points and write a backup plan for each - what could go wrong, who I call first, what the fallback is, and how much it would cost. Then write a two-line line I can add to every vendor contract asking them to name a substitute or refund the advance.

50 · The advance and invoice tracker

Use when: Never lose track of what you have paid.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build an advance-and-invoice tracker for a wedding with these vendors: [list vendors and agreed amounts]. Columns: Vendor, Total, GST, Advance due, Advance paid, Advance date, Balance due, Balance date, Invoice received, Notes. Fill the structure and leave the figures blank. Then write the one-line message I send a vendor whose invoice is pending.

Part 6 - Decor, Design and Mood Boards

Design is where clients judge you fastest. These prompts turn words into a board a vendor can build from.

51 · The mood board description per function

Use when: One board per function. Words a decorator can actually build from.

> Act as a wedding designer. For each of these functions - [mehndi, haldi, sangeet, wedding, reception] - write a 90-word mood board description for a [style] wedding of [X] guests in [city]. Cover palette, flowers, fabric, lighting, furniture and one signature detail per function. Make the functions feel like one wedding but not identical. Output as five labelled paragraphs.

52 · Palette and floral plan

Use when: Colour first, flowers second.

> Act as a wedding designer. Build a colour palette and floral plan for a [style] wedding. Give: a primary palette of three colours with one accent, the flowers available in season in India for [month], where each colour appears (entrance, mandap, tables, signage), and a cheaper alternative for each flower. Then list what to avoid in [month] because it will not last in the heat.

53 · Stage and mandap concept

Use when: The one structure every guest photographs.

> Act as a wedding designer. Write a concept for the main stage or mandap for a [X]-guest wedding in [city]. Describe the structure, the backdrop, the flowers, the seating, the lighting from front and back, and the ritual space needed for [tradition]. Give three directions at three price points - tight, mid and generous - with one line each on the look and rough cost band. Under 250 words.

54 · Entrance and photo-moment design

Use when: Guests judge a wedding in the first 20 metres.

> Act as a wedding designer. Design the entrance and the photo moments for a [X]-guest wedding. Give me: the arrival experience, the welcome element, the main photo backdrop, two secondary photo spots, a selfie-friendly corner, and signage ideas with Indian flavour. For each, one line on cost level (low, mid, high). End with the three things to avoid because they block the baraat or crowd the exit.

55 · Tablescape and centrepiece ideas

Use when: Small details, big photographs.

> Act as a wedding designer. Give me 10 centrepiece and tablescape ideas for a [style] wedding of [X] guests at Rs. [budget per table]. For each: the idea, the main materials, the flower or prop, and one line on whether it survives wind, heat or a buffet line. Rank them from most to least practical. Then write the two-line version I can send the decorator as a starting brief.

56 · Lighting and sound plan

Use when: Lighting makes or breaks the photos. Plan it, do not inherit it.

> Act as a wedding designer and production planner. Write a lighting and sound plan for a [X]-guest wedding across [functions] in [city]. Cover: ceremony lighting for photography, reception wash and feature lighting, pathway and signage lighting, uplighters, and a sound plan for the procession, the ceremony and the reception. Note where the venue's in-house rules will limit me. Output as a table: Area, What is needed, Why, Cost level.

57 · Signage, stationery and welcome details

Use when: The details guests touch.

> Act as a wedding designer. List the signage and stationery a [X]-guest wedding actually needs: welcome board, seating chart, table numbers, menu cards, direction signs, bar and food-stall signs, and thank-you cards. For each: what it says, the size and material, and whether to print or go digital. Then write the exact text for the welcome board and the seating-chart header.

58 · Cultural and ritual accuracy check

Use when: Design must respect the ritual, not decorate over it.

> Act as an Indian wedding planner with deep knowledge of rituals. For this wedding: [tradition - North Indian Hindu / South Indian / Sikh / Muslim / Christian / mixed], list the ritual and practical needs that the design must accommodate - for example the havan space, the puja items and their placement, the direction of seating, the timing of rituals, and the respect due to elders. Flag five mistakes decorators commonly make. Be accurate and respectful; where custom varies by region, say so.

59 · Budget-friendly and sustainable swaps

Use when: Eco-conscious without looking cheap.

> Act as a wedding designer. Give 10 sustainable or budget-friendly decor choices for a [X]-guest wedding - for example potted plants that become gifts, fabric backdrops reused across functions, LED and rented lighting, seed-paper invitations, and rented furniture. For each: the idea, the saving or benefit, and one practical caution. Output as a table.

60 · The client-facing decor brief

Use when: The document you hand to the decorator, approved by the client.

> Act as a wedding planner. Turn these design notes into a single client-facing decor brief that I will also hand to the decorator: [paste notes]. Structure: functions and timings, palette, per-function concept, key structures, flowers, lighting, signage, setup and teardown windows, what the client has approved, and what is still open. End with a signature line for the client. Under 500 words.

Part 7 - Timeline, Run-of-Show and Checklists

The invisible work that makes a wedding look effortless. Build it once, reuse it every season.

61 · The backward planning timeline

Use when: Work backwards from the date. Nothing gets missed.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a planning timeline for a wedding on [date] in [city] with [X] guests and [Y] functions. Start [X] months before and work backwards. For each month list what I do, what the client decides, and what gets booked or paid. Highlight the four dates where things genuinely cannot slip. Output as a table: Month, My tasks, Client decisions, Deadline. Then give the one-line version for the client.

62 · The wedding-week countdown

Use when: The last seven days, hour by hour.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a wedding-week countdown for a [X]-function wedding starting 7 days out. For each day: what is confirmed, who I call, what is packed, what is printed, and what the client is told. Include the final guest count deadline, the vendor reconfirmation calls, the cash and tip envelopes, and the family briefing. Output as a day-by-day checklist.

63 · The minute-by-minute run-of-show

Use when: The document that keeps the day on rails.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a minute-by-minute run-of-show for the wedding day: [describe the day - muhurat time, baraat, ceremony, lunch, photos, reception]. For each line give: time, what happens, who leads it, who else must be ready, and the cue for the next item. Include buffers around the muhurat and the meal. Output as a table. Then list the five things that most often break a run-of-show.

64 · The baraat and procession plan

Use when: The most unpredictable 45 minutes of the day.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a plan for the baraat and procession for a wedding in [city] with [X] guests. Cover: assembly point and time, route and permissions, the dhol and band, the vehicle or horse, the dancing zone, security and crowd control, water and shade, the arrival cue at the venue, and the backup plan for rain or traffic. Output as a checklist with timings. Then write the two-line version for the groom's family.

65 · The multi-function master schedule

Use when: Five functions, one household, no clashes.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a master schedule across [functions: mehndi, haldi, sangeet, wedding, reception] over [number] days for a [X]-guest wedding in [city]. For each function: date, start and end time, venue, dress code, key rituals, vendors involved, and the family lead. Flag any clash of vendors, family members or transport. Output as a table, then list the three risks you see.

66 · The family responsibility chart

Use when: Everyone wants to help. Give them a lane.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a family responsibility chart for this wedding: [list family members and their relation]. Assign clear roles - guest hospitality, rituals and puja items, transport, cash and vendor payments, gift management, elder care, and children. For each person: their role, who they report to, and the one decision they own. Output as a table. Add a note on how to handle two people who both want the same role.

67 · Guest logistics and accommodation

Use when: Out-of-town guests are a project of their own.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a guest logistics and accommodation plan for a wedding in [city] with [X] out-of-town guests across [Y] functions. Cover: arrival and pickup, room blocks and rates, check-in and check-out, local transport, meals beyond the functions, a welcome kit, a helpdesk number, and a plan for elders and children. Output as a checklist, then draft the guest information message (under 120 words).

68 · The contingency and emergency plan

Use when: Something always goes wrong. Decide now what you will do.

> Act as a wedding planner. Build a contingency plan for a [X]-guest wedding in [city] in [month]. Cover the eight most likely problems: rain, vendor no-show, power cut, late guests, medical emergency, a lost item, a guest-count overshoot, and a payment or cash issue. For each: early warning sign, immediate action, who does it, and the fallback. Output as a table. Then list the numbers I must have saved in my phone on the day.

69 · The on-the-day crew briefing

Use when: Your crew is only as good as your briefing.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the briefing I give my on-site crew the morning of a [X]-guest wedding. Include: the day's shape, each person's station and shift, radio or phone etiquette, the dress code, the client's key people and how to treat them, the escalation rule, and the three things that must never happen. Under 300 words, spoken tone, easy to read aloud.

70 · The teardown and returns checklist

Use when: The last three hours decide whether you get rebooked.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a teardown and returns checklist for the end of a [X]-function wedding. Cover: vendor teardown order, returning rented items, collecting gifts and valuables safely, settling on-site balances and tips, checking the venue for damages, collecting my own equipment, and a final walk-through with the client. Then write the two-line goodnight message I send the couple that night.

Part 8 - Instagram and Content Engine

Wedding work is won on Instagram long before the enquiry arrives. This is the engine.

71 · Your content pillars

Use when: Five pillars. Endless posts.

> Act as a social media strategist for wedding businesses in India. Define five content pillars for my Instagram page, given that I am a wedding planner in [city] working on [type] weddings. For each pillar: what it is, why it works for my audience, three example post ideas, and the format (reel, carousel, photo, story). Keep it specific to the Indian wedding market, not generic social-media advice.

72 · The 30-day content calendar

Use when: A month of posts planned in one prompt.

> Act as a social media manager for a wedding planner in [city]. Build a 30-day Instagram calendar for [month], with [X] posts a week and daily stories. For each post: date, format, pillar, hook line, and one line on the visual. Use the season: [e.g. muhurat dates, festive season, off-season]. Output as a table. Add a note on the best posting times for Indian audiences.

73 · The behind-the-scenes reel script

Use when: BTS outperforms finished decor on reach.

> Act as a short-form video writer. Write a 30-second Instagram Reel script about [topic - e.g. setting up a sangeet stage the night before]. Format it as: shot, on-screen text, voiceover line. Hook in the first two seconds. Keep the tone real and unpolished, not a corporate ad. End with a soft call to action that is not 'DM me to book'.

74 · The carousel: how we planned this wedding

Use when: Save-able content that shows your process.

> Act as a wedding planner and content writer. Turn this wedding into an 8-slide Instagram carousel titled [title]: [paste the brief and what you did]. For each slide: the heading, the two or three lines of text, and the visual. Slide 1 is the hook, slide 8 is the call to action. Make the middle slides genuinely useful - the problem, the decision, the result. Under 25 words per slide.

75 · The caption bank

Use when: Twenty captions ready to paste.

> Act as a social media writer for a wedding planner in India. Write 20 Instagram captions I can reuse: five about weddings I planned, five about planning tips, five about the season or muhurat, and five personal or behind-the-scenes. Each under 60 words, warm, Indian English, one or two emojis maximum. End each with a question or a soft call to action. No cliches like 'happily ever after'.

76 · Story polls and engagement prompts

Use when: Stories keep you top of mind between weddings.

> Act as a social media strategist. Give me 15 Instagram story ideas for a wedding planner in the [season], each with the exact text to put on the screen and the sticker to use (poll, quiz, question, countdown, slider). Half must be useful to couples, half must be fun or personal. Then write the two follow-up stories for the best-performing one.

77 · The client testimonial post

Use when: Turn a happy client into reach.

> Act as a wedding planner. A client has sent me this feedback: [paste]. Turn it into an Instagram post - a short intro line, the quote itself trimmed for impact, one line on the wedding, and a closing line. Under 120 words. Then write the polite WhatsApp message asking their permission to post it, including the exact words I will use.

78 · Trend-jacking for the season

Use when: Ride the wave without looking desperate.

> Act as a social media strategist for wedding businesses in India. It is [date] and the wedding season [is opening / is in full swing / is pausing]. Give me five timely content angles I can post this week that connect my work to what people are actually thinking about right now - muhurat dates, venue rush, budgets, family pressure, weather. For each: the hook, the format, and why it is timely. No news-jacking that could embarrass the brand.

79 · The vendor-collab post

Use when: One post, two audiences.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a collaboration post with [vendor type and name] about a wedding we did together: [brief details]. Include a caption that credits them properly, tags them, tells the story of how we worked together, and gives couples a reason to trust both of us. Under 150 words. Then write the two-line DM I send them before posting to agree the details.

80 · The BTS shot list

Use when: Tell your photographer what to capture for content.

> Act as a content producer. Give me a shot list for behind-the-scenes content at a wedding I am managing - the shots that build my brand: the setup, the crew, the timeline board, the vendor huddle, the detail close-ups, the client reaction, the teardown. For each: the shot, when to take it, and which format it suits (reel, carousel, story). Then list the five shots I should never post because they breach client privacy.

81 · Muhurat and festival countdown posts

Use when: The dates your clients are searching for.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a series of three Instagram posts announcing the [season] muhurat dates for [year]: one carousel listing the dates month by month, one story set, and one reel script. For each, tell couples why booking early matters this season. Accurate to the published panchang for [year] - do not invent dates, and add a line telling couples to confirm with their family pandit.

82 · Bio, highlights and pinned posts refresh

Use when: Your profile converts the visitor the post brought.

> Act as a social media strategist. Rewrite my Instagram bio for a wedding planner in [city] working on [type] weddings. Give three options, each under 150 characters, with the same call to action. Then name the five story highlights I should have, and describe the three posts I should pin and why. Keep it specific to the Indian wedding market.

Part 9 - Contracts, Payments and Client Care

The unglamorous half of the job. Get this right and you never chase a client or a payment again.

83 · The scope clause

Use when: One paragraph that prevents most disputes.

> Act as a contract writer for Indian wedding planners. Draft a clear scope-of-work clause for a proposal. It must define exactly what I will deliver, the number of functions and meetings covered, the number of on-site team members, what is explicitly excluded, and what constitutes a change to scope. Plain English, no legalese, under 220 words. Add a line the client signs to confirm they have read it.

84 · Payment and cancellation terms in plain English

Use when: Terms clients will actually read.

> Act as a contract writer for Indian wedding planners. Write the payment and cancellation section of my agreement in plain, friendly English. Cover: the booking advance and whether it is refundable, the milestone schedule, what happens if the client postpones, what happens if they cancel at [X] days, [Y] days and [Z] days out, my cancellation terms if I am unable to deliver, and how refunds are processed. Under 250 words. Add a one-line summary at the top.

85 · The force majeure and weather clause

Use when: Rain, strikes, restrictions - plan for them in writing.

> Act as a contract writer for Indian wedding planners. Draft a force majeure clause covering: severe weather, government restrictions, bandh or strike, a vendor's failure, illness, and any event beyond reasonable control. Explain what happens to advances, what I will do to reschedule, and what is not my responsibility. Plain English, under 200 words. Then write the two-line WhatsApp message telling a client this clause exists and why it protects them.

86 · The change-request process

Use when: Scope creep, handled politely.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write a simple change-request process I can explain to clients in two lines, plus the message I send when a client asks for something outside scope: [describe the request]. The process should cover how they raise a change, how I price it, how long it takes, and that the change is confirmed only in writing. Keep the tone helpful, never punitive.

87 · The postponement and refund policy message

Use when: Deliver hard news kindly.

> Act as a wedding planner. A client wants to postpone their [date] wedding by [X] months, or cancel it. Write a message (under 180 words) that (1) responds with empathy first, (2) states plainly what the agreement says, (3) gives them the two or three real options and their cost implications, and (4) commits to a date by which I will confirm the new arrangement. No blame, no vagueness.

88 · The vendor agreement checklist

Use when: Ten things every vendor agreement must contain.

> Act as an event contracts advisor in India. List the ten clauses every vendor agreement must contain for a wedding in India - deliverable, date and time, price with GST, advance and balance, cancellation, delay, substitute staff, damage and liability, confidentiality of the client's event, and dispute resolution. For each: one line on what it must say and one line on what goes wrong if it is missing. Output as a table.

89 · The data and privacy note

Use when: Guest lists and photos are personal data. Say how you handle them.

> Act as a privacy-aware wedding planner in India. Draft a short data and privacy note for my client agreement, aligned with the spirit of India's Digital Personal Data Protection Act. Cover: what personal data I collect (guest lists, contact numbers, addresses, photos), why, who sees it (my team and named vendors), how long I keep it, and how a client can ask me to delete it. Plain English, under 180 words, no legal jargon.

90 · The pre-event check-in message

Use when: One week out, calm everyone down.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the message I send the couple one week before their [X]-function wedding. It should reassure them that everything is confirmed, tell them the three things I need from them by a specific date, remind them of the wedding-week plan, and give them my number for anything urgent. Under 160 words, warm and steady. Then write the shorter version for the parents.

91 · The difficult-conversation script

Use when: When something has gone wrong on the day.

> Act as a senior wedding planner. Something has gone wrong: [describe - a vendor is late / a decor element failed / a guest is upset / the schedule has slipped]. Write the script I use to tell the couple, their parents and the vendor. Each version must: state the facts plainly, say what I am doing right now, give a realistic timeline, and avoid blaming anyone in front of the client. Then write the two-line version for the vendor.

92 · The handover and closure note

Use when: Close the project properly. It earns the referral.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the project-closure note I send after a wedding. It should confirm everything delivered, list the final payments and settle any balance, hand over the photo and vendor contacts, ask for feedback, and thank them for trusting me. Under 200 words. End with a line that invites a review without asking for one directly.

Part 10 - Delivery, Reviews and Off-Season Growth

The season is short. What you do between weddings decides next season's bookings.

93 · The review ask that works

Use when: Ask at the moment they are happiest.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write the message I send a couple [X] days after their wedding asking for a Google review. It should (1) thank them warmly and mention one specific moment from their wedding, (2) make the ask easy with the direct link placeholder, (3) tell them the two things that would help other couples most if they mention them, and (4) say there is no pressure. Under 120 words.

94 · Turning a wedding into a case study

Use when: One case study does the work of ten posts.

> Act as a wedding planner. Turn this wedding into a one-page case study for my website and portfolio: [paste details - the brief, the challenge, what I did, the result, the client's words]. Structure: the couple and the brief, the challenge, the approach, the outcome with specific numbers, and a short client quote. Under 400 words, written so a couple reading it thinks 'they can handle mine'.

95 · The referral programme message

Use when: Turn past clients into a pipeline.

> Act as a wedding planner. Design a simple referral programme: what a past client gets for a genuine referral that books, and how they claim it. Then write the message announcing it, under 120 words, warm and non-transactional. Add a line for what to do if two people claim the same referral.

96 · The off-season early-bird campaign

Use when: Fill the next season before it starts.

> Act as a wedding planner. It is the off-season and the next season opens on [date]. Write an early-bird campaign: the offer (for example, a locked-in rate or a free design consultation for bookings before [date]), the deadline, and the reason the offer exists. Then write the Instagram caption, the WhatsApp broadcast, and the two-line story text. Under 150 words in total.

97 · The next-season availability announcement

Use when: Tell the market when you are open.

> Act as a wedding planner. Write an announcement that bookings are open for the [season] wedding dates. Include the headline muhurat dates, a line on why these dates fill first, how to enquire, and one line on what a first consultation includes. Give me three versions: an Instagram post caption, a WhatsApp status, and a short email to past enquiries. Accurate to the published panchang for [year].

98 · Services page and Google Business copy

Use when: Be findable when someone searches for a planner in your city.

> Act as a copywriter for wedding businesses in India. Write (1) a services page for my website, covering full planning, decor, on-the-day management and destination weddings, each with a short paragraph and what is included, and (2) a Google Business profile description under 750 characters. Both must be clear, local, and free of cliches. Mention my city, [city], naturally.

99 · The pricing-increase announcement

Use when: Raise rates without losing your existing clients.

> Act as a wedding planner. I am increasing my fees by [X]% from [date]. Write (1) a message to past clients and enquirers explaining the increase and what now includes more, (2) a short post for Instagram, and (3) a one-line response for someone who says 'but you charged less last year'. Warm, confident, no apology. Under 200 words in total.

100 · The 90-day off-season growth plan

Use when: Use the quiet months to build the next season.

> Act as a business coach for wedding planners in India. Build a 90-day off-season growth plan across three areas: business (pricing, contracts, cash flow, systems), marketing (content, portfolio, reviews, Google, referrals), and craft (skills, vendor relationships, one new service). For each week, give one specific action. Output as a table: Week, Focus area, Action, Why it matters.

Appendix A - The 2026-27 wedding season calendar

A planning reference. Muhurat dates shift by city and by panchang - always have the family pandit confirm the final date and time.

The 2026-27 season at a glance

- Wedding-season business in India: about Rs. 6.5 lakh crore in one season, from roughly 46 lakh weddings (CAIT trade estimate, November 2025).
- Average wedding spend reported by couples on a planning platform: Rs. 39.5 lakh, up 8% year on year; destination weddings average Rs. 58 lakh (WedMeGood Annual Report 2025-26).
- City averages: Jaipur Rs. 73 lakh, Delhi Rs. 38 lakh, Bangalore and Hyderabad Rs. 37 lakh each, Mumbai Rs. 35 lakh.
- About 79% of couples fund the wedding from savings; 15% take a loan, averaging Rs. 15.5 lakh.
- Nearly 1 in 4 wedding vendors already use AI for editing, mood boards, content drafting and client communication (WedMeGood).
- GST on event management and wedding planning is 18% under SAC 998596; registration is compulsory once turnover crosses Rs. 20 lakh (Rs. 10 lakh in special-category states).
- Place of supply for event services is where the event is held - so an out-of-state wedding attracts IGST, not CGST plus SGST.

The North Indian wedding season reopens on 21 November 2026, after Dev Uthani Ekadashi on 20 November, and runs through the winter with two pauses: Kharmas from mid-December 2026 to Makar Sankranti on 14 January 2027, and a second pause from mid-March to mid-April 2027. Because the season is short and the backlog is large, the strong weekend dates - 21 November 2026, 5 and 6 December 2026, and most of February 2027 - are the ones venues, caterers and photographers book out first. Use this table to start your venue conversations and your content calendar, not to fix a date.

Month	Auspicious dates (planning reference)	What it means for booking
November 2026	21, 24, 25, 26	Season reopens after Dev Uthani Ekadashi (20 Nov). Only four dates - the whole backlog lands here.
December 2026	2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 12	Second pressure cluster. Kharmas pauses the calendar from mid-December.
January 2027	15, 18, 19, 20, 24, 26, 27, 30, 31	Reopens after Makar Sankranti (14 Jan). More dates and less competition than December.
February 2027	2, 3, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 21, 25, 26, 27, 28	The busiest month of the winter. One date (22 Feb) is disputed across panchangs.
March 2027	1, 2, 3, 4, 9, 10, 14	Last dates before the second pause.
April 2027	18, 19, 21, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28	Season resumes after the second pause (mid-March to 14 April).

Sources: published panchang lists for New Delhi and Bengaluru (Drik Panchang, Sanatan Bodh, GaneshaSpeaks and independent wedding listings), checked October 2026. Lists differ by a day or two between cities and traditions; South Indian calendars carry their own additional dates.

Appendix B - GST and pricing quick reference

Event management and wedding planning, verified for FY 2026-27.

Event management and wedding planning attract 18% GST under SAC 998596, and the rate was retained unchanged in the GST 2.0 two-slab rationalisation that took effect on 22 September 2025. Registration is compulsory once your aggregate turnover crosses Rs. 20 lakh in a financial year (Rs. 10 lakh in special-category states). If you bill components separately, each carries its own rate; if you sell one composite package, the whole package is taxed at the rate of the principal supply - usually 18% where event management is the main service. Remember that the place of supply for event services is where the event is held, so an out-of-state wedding attracts IGST rather than CGST plus SGST.

Service	SAC	GST rate	ITC for a business client
Event management fee (planning, coordination)	998596	18%	Yes
Wedding / social event planning	998596	18%	No - personal use
Venue / banquet hall rental	9972	18%	Yes
Photography / videography	9983	18%	Yes
Decor, DJ, stage, entertainment	9996	18%	Often blocked
Outdoor catering (food and beverages)	9963	5% (no ITC)	Blocked
Catering at specified premises (tariff Rs. 7,500 or more)	9963	18%	Blocked

Other rules worth having on one page:

- Place of supply is the venue, not the client's address - bill IGST for events held outside your registered state.
- A casual taxable person registration (valid up to 90 days) may be needed to work an event in a state where you have no fixed place of business.
- Input tax credit is your biggest lever: hold valid tax invoices, and make sure your vendors report the supply in their GSTR-1.
- Section 17(5) blocks credit on food and beverages, personal consumption and most vehicle hire - so outdoor catering rarely gives you usable credit.
- Compliance rhythm: GSTR-1 by the 11th, GSTR-3B by the 20th, GSTR-9 annually. E-invoicing applies once turnover crosses Rs. 5 crore.
- GST on services is generally due when the service is supplied, not when an advance is received - reconcile booking advances against final invoices.

This is general information for planning, not tax advice. Confirm the current rate and SAC on the official GST portal, or with your chartered accountant, before you invoice.

Appendix C - The AI tool stack for planners

Six tools that cover the writing, the reading, the research and the design. Prices checked October 2026.

You do not need all six, and you do not need to start on a paid plan. The honest rule is this: run the free tiers of ChatGPT and Claude first, add Canva free for design, and upgrade one tool only when you are using it more than three times a week. The writing in this pack works in any of the assistants below.

Tool	What you use it for	Cost
ChatGPT (OpenAI)	Drafting proposals, RFPs, WhatsApp replies, run-of-show. Free tier is enough to start; paid tier adds higher limits and file uploads.	Free tier; paid plans from around USD 8-20 per month
Claude (Anthropic)	Reading long venue and vendor contracts, comparing proposals, and writing that does not sound corporate. Strongest for long documents.	Free tier; paid plan around USD 20 per month
Gemini (Google)	Vendor and venue research, and anything that lives in Google Sheets, Docs and Drive. Good at structured tables.	Free tier; paid plans available
Canva	Invitations, signage, seating charts, social graphics and client decks - with a brand kit to keep colours consistent.	Free tier; Pro around USD 13-18 per month
Perplexity	Fast, source-linked research on venues, cities and vendor options. Always verify the numbers it quotes.	Free tier; paid plan around USD 20 per month
Notion AI / Airtable	Keeping your event database, checklists and vendor lists queryable in one place.	Free tiers; paid from around USD 10 per seat per month

Three rules that keep you out of trouble

- Never paste an unredacted guest list, a client's phone numbers or a signed contract with personal data into a public AI tool.
- Double-check every output that contains a price, a date, a capacity or a vendor name. AI invents plausible numbers.
- Do not treat an AI contract review as legal advice. Use it to flag clauses, then have a lawyer read the flagged ones.

Appendix D - Your fill-in document kit

One reusable proposal, quote sheet and decor brief - the templates you build once and use all season.

Proposal structure

- Cover note - one specific thing the couple said, and what makes your approach right for them.
- About us - three lines, with one number (weddings done, years, or the largest guest count handled).
- Understanding of the brief - restate their priorities in your words so they know you listened.
- The concept - the story of the day in 200-250 words, with a theme name.
- Scope of services - exactly what you will do, function by function.
- Timeline of deliverables - what happens in each month, and what the client decides.
- Your team - who does what, and the number of crew on the wedding day.
- Investment - three tiers with clear inclusions and exclusions.
- What is not included - vendor payments, GST, venue, transport, alcohol, gifts, out-of-city travel and stay.
- Terms and next steps - payment milestones, the deadline for the offer, and how to confirm.

Quote sheet columns

Item | Vendor | Quantity | Unit rate | Subtotal | GST rate | GST amount | Total | Advance paid | Balance | Notes. The three rows planners most often forget: service staff, crockery and cutlery, and the GST on pass-through vendor costs.

Decor brief sections

Functions and timings | Palette | Per-function concept | Key structures | Flowers | Lighting | Signage | Setup and teardown windows | What the client has approved | What is still open | Client signature line.

Appendix E - The 30-day season ramp-up plan

If you do nothing else with this pack, do this. One action a day for a month.

Window	Focus	What you do
Days 1-3	Set up	Paste your Master Context into a new chat and save it. Open a spreadsheet with the cost-sheet and advance-tracker columns from Part 4 and Part 5.
Days 4-7	Price and package	Use prompts 23, 31 and 37 to build three service tiers and a budget-allocation sheet for your market. Lock your fee and your exclusions page.
Days 8-12	Build the document kit	Use prompts 21, 24, 25, 26 and 83-89 to assemble one reusable proposal, one contract and one decor brief. This is your season's template set.
Days 13-17	Fill the pipeline	Use prompts 1-10 to write your reply templates for WhatsApp and Instagram, then prompts 71-82 to plan a month of content around the muhurat dates.
Days 18-23	Vendors	Use prompts 41-50 to send a standard RFP to your photographers, decorators and caterers, and build a verified vendor sheet with rates and GST.
Days 24-30	Systems and rehearsal	Use prompts 61-70 to build your timeline, run-of-show and contingency plan. Run one dry rehearsal of the run-of-show with your crew before the first wedding.

Appendix F - The one-page cheat sheet

Pin this above your desk for the season.

1. Paste the Master Context first, every time.

2. Role, facts, format - give the AI all three.

3. Ask for three options, then pick and edit.

4. Write 'do not invent any price, date or vendor name' in every prompt.

5. Verify every number, muhurat and vendor rate yourself before it reaches a client.

6. Keep GST at 18% and SAC 998596 on every invoice; remember the place of supply is the venue.

7. Reply to enquiries within an hour; the first warm reply usually wins the booking.

8. Recap every call in writing within 24 hours.

9. Never quote without the date, the city and the guest count.

10. The season's first dates fill first - November 2026 and February 2027 will go before anything else.
