THE AI PROMPT PACK FOR INDIAN INSURANCE ADVISORS

90 copy-paste prompts and WhatsApp scripts for the jobs you do every day — renewals, objections, claims and compliance

90 PROMPTS · 10 SECTIONS · INDIA 2026 EDITION · IRDAI-AWARE

digitalkartai.shop

Verify every rule, benefit and figure before you send or publish.
This pack is a drafting tool — not insurance, legal or tax advice.

Welcome — read this first

You sell protection for a living — but most of your day disappears into typing the same messages over and over. The renewal nudge. The quote follow-up. The “what is the price?” reply. The objection you have answered a hundred times. This pack hands all of that to AI.

This is not a theory book. It is a working toolkit of 90 ready-to-copy prompts. Paste one into ChatGPT, Gemini, Claude or any AI assistant, replace the [brackets] with your real client details, and you get a first draft in seconds. You add the facts, read it once in your own voice, and send.

The one rule that keeps you safe

AI drafts, you verify, you send — in that order. An AI can get a rule, a waiting period, a premium figure or a tax line wrong. Never send a message about a specific policy, benefit or claim without checking it against the policy document and IRDAI's rules. This pack is a drafting tool — not insurance, legal or tax advice.

How this pack is organised

- Sections 1–2: Prospecting and the first WhatsApp reply — how you start a conversation well.
- Sections 3–4: The Renewal Machine and the quote follow-up sequence — where your income lives.
- Sections 5–6: Objection handling and plain-language policy explanations.
- Sections 7–8: Cross-sell, needs analysis, and claim & service support.
- Sections 9–10: Referrals, personal brand, compliance and your daily system.
- The Toolbox: The prompt formula, an India rules cheat-sheet, a fill-in client brief, the phrases to avoid, a 30-day plan and FAQs.

How to get a great answer every time

Give the AI three things every time: your role, your real facts, and your rules. Instead of “write a renewal message”, say: “You are an Indian insurance advisor. My client is [name], a motor policy holder with [insurer], expiring on [date], premium [amount]. Write a warm 3-line WhatsApp reminder. No pressure, no guaranteed-return talk, one clear call to action.” The more real detail you paste, the less the AI invents — and the safer your message.

Start with the section you need today

You do not have to read this front to back. Renewals due this week? Go to Section 3. A quote going cold? Section 4. A tricky objection? Section 5. The Toolbox at the back is worth reading once, properly.

Section 1 · Prospecting & Lead Generation

Warm up new prospects without cold-calling all day

Most advisors do not have a lead problem — they have a starting-conversation problem. These prompts write the first message for you: warm, human, and compliant, so you can reach out to more people in less time.

1. The warm-market message (start here)

You are my writing assistant. Write a short, warm WhatsApp message to someone I already know — a friend, neighbour, ex-colleague or past client — to gently reconnect and ask if I can do a simple protection review for them. Context: [their name], [how I know them], my name is [name], an insurance advisor. Rules: under 50 words, no hard sell, no fear, no promises, one clear ask. Friendly and personal. Also give me a 15-word follow-up if they do not reply.

2. The cold first-touch (compliant)

Write a polite first WhatsApp message to a new lead who enquired about [product, e.g. health insurance]. I am [name], an IRDAI-licensed insurance advisor. Rules: introduce myself, thank them, confirm the product they asked about, ask one qualifying question, and offer to send details. Under 55 words. No guaranteed returns, no ‘best plan’ claim, no pressure, and never imply guaranteed approval or claim settlement.

3. DM opener for LinkedIn or Instagram

Write a short, professional direct message for [LinkedIn / Instagram] to someone in my network who may need [term / health / motor] insurance. I am [name], an insurance advisor in [city]. Tone: helpful, not salesy. Under 45 words. Mention one useful reason to connect (a free cover review), and end with a soft question. No links in the first message.

4. The referral ask (soft)

Write a warm message asking an existing happy client, [name], for a referral. Context: they hold a [product] with me and renewed last month. Rules: thank them first, keep it under 45 words, make the ask easy (‘if anyone you know needs a cover review, just share my number’), and give them a one-line message they can forward on my behalf.

5. Society or community event invite

Write a friendly invitation for a free 20-minute ‘insurance awareness’ session I am hosting for [society / community / office group] on [date] at [place]. Audience: [families / young earners / senior citizens]. Rules: under 70 words, no product pushing, promise one clear takeaway, and include a reply-to-register line. Educational tone only.

6. Five WhatsApp Status posts that build trust

Write five short WhatsApp Status updates (each under 20 words) for an insurance advisor. Themes: (1) a myth about insurance, (2) a practical tip, (3) a client question answered, (4) a reminder about renewal season, (5) a friendly introduction of who I am and how I help. No fear, no guaranteed-return claims, no product prices. Plain, human English.

7. A festival greeting that is not spam

Write a warm [Diwali / Pongal / Eid / Onam] greeting WhatsApp message from an insurance advisor to past clients. Rules: lead with the greeting and good wishes, keep it under 40 words, add one gentle line that I am here if they need anything this season, and stop. No offer, no discount, no product mention. Respectful and personal.

8. Neighbourhood first-visit script

Write a short door-to-door opening script for an insurance advisor visiting homes in [area]. Goal: introduce myself and leave a good impression, not to sell at the door. Rules: under 60 words, mention my name and that I help families in this area with protection reviews, ask permission to share my card, and thank them. Polite, brief, non-pushy.

9. Local business cross-referral pitch

Write a short message to a local [shopkeeper / doctor / CA / real-estate agent] proposing a friendly cross-referral. I am an insurance advisor in [area]. Rules: under 60 words, offer to send them clients and to help their own customers with cover, suggest a 10-minute coffee, no money talk. Warm and professional.

10. A simple lead magnet

Suggest three simple, free lead magnets an Indian insurance advisor could offer on WhatsApp to start conversations (for example, a one-page ‘how much cover does your family really need?’ checklist). For each: give a title, a one-line description, and a 30-word WhatsApp message to offer it. No product prices, no guaranteed-return promises.

Section 2 · WhatsApp First Reply & Qualification

Speed wins — most buyers message several advisors at once

In India the deal is often decided in the first few minutes. Whoever replies first and asks the right questions usually wins the visit or the call. These prompts help you reply fast, qualify without interrogating, and keep the conversation alive.

11. The instant first reply (under 60 seconds)

Write a short, warm WhatsApp reply to a new insurance enquiry. Enquiry was about: [term / health / motor / pension]. My name is [name], an insurance advisor. Must: greet them, confirm we can help, ask one qualifying question (their need or family size), and end with a question so the chat keeps going. Under 45 words. Friendly, no emoji spam (one at most). Also give me a 20-word version for when I am busy.

12. Qualification questions that do not feel like a form

Give me a natural WhatsApp flow of 4 short messages that qualify an insurance buyer. I need to learn: who the cover is for, the budget comfort, existing cover, and how soon they want it. Each message must ask only ONE question and sound like a person, not a form. After the four, suggest how to tag the lead as Hot / Warm / Cold. Context: I am an advisor in [city].

13. Hinglish version for local buyers

Rewrite this WhatsApp message in friendly Hinglish (Hindi written in English letters) the way an advisor in [city] actually talks to local clients. Keep it respectful and professional — no slang that could offend. Keep every fact exactly as given. Message: [paste your English message].

14. Regional-language version

Translate this WhatsApp message into [Tamil / Bengali / Marathi / Telugu / Gujarati] in the natural, everyday way a local advisor would speak. Keep it short and warm, keep all facts and numbers exactly as given, and do not add any promise or claim. Message: [paste your English message].

15. The 60-second voice note script

Write a warm 60-second WhatsApp voice-note script to send a client after an enquiry. Context: they asked about [product]. I am [name], an advisor. Rules: greet, thank them for reaching out, say in one line how I can help, mention the single next step (a short call or a cover review), and sign off warmly. Conversational, spoken English. About 120 words.

16. Share a brochure or catalogue message

Write a short WhatsApp message to send along with a [brochure / product PDF]. Context: client is [name], interested in [product]. Rules: under 40 words, tell them what you are sharing, mention one thing to look at, ask them to reply with questions, and add: ‘Please read the policy terms and exclusions carefully.’ No promises of returns or approval.

17. Book the appointment (with two slots)

Write a WhatsApp message that books a call or meeting with a warm lead. Context: [name], interested in [product]. Offer two specific time slots: [slot 1] and [slot 2]. Rules: under 50 words, make replying easy (they just pick 1 or 2), confirm it is a short 15-minute chat, and thank them. Friendly and clear.

18. The 24-hour gentle nudge

Write a short, polite WhatsApp follow-up to a lead who did not reply to my first message 24 hours ago. Context: [name], enquired about [product]. Rules: under 30 words, no guilt, no pressure, restate my offer to help in one line, and end with a soft question. Do not repeat the whole first message.

19. Answering ‘what is the price?’ (compliant)

Write a WhatsApp reply to a client who simply asked ‘what is the price?’ for [product]. Rules: explain in one friendly line that the premium depends on a few details (age, cover, term), ask for the two details you need, and offer to send an exact quote. Under 50 words. Never guess a premium figure, and never promise the lowest price.

20. The summary message after a good chat

Turn my rough notes into a clean WhatsApp summary to send a client after a call. Notes: [paste rough notes — what they need, what I suggested, the next step]. Rules: under 70 words, bullet-free and readable, restate the next step and the date, and thank them. Do not add any fact I did not give you.

Section 3 · The Renewal Machine

The 30 / 15 / 7 / 1 cadence that stops lapses

Renewals are the steadiest income an advisor has, and the easiest to lose to silence. A structured WhatsApp reminder sequence sent 30, 15, 7 and 1 day before expiry is the single highest-value automation you can switch on. Send from your WhatsApp Business number, and only to clients who expect to hear from you.

21. 30-day soft heads-up

Write a warm WhatsApp renewal reminder sent 30 days before a policy expires. Context: [client name], [insurer] [product] policy, expiring on [date], premium [amount]. Rules: under 50 words, friendly heads-up tone, no urgency yet, mention that I will help with the renewal, and ask them to reply if anything has changed. No fear, no guaranteed-return talk.

22. 15-day actionable message (premium + link)

Write a WhatsApp renewal message sent 15 days before expiry, this time with the action. Context: [client name], [product], expiring [date], premium [amount], payment link [link]. Rules: under 60 words, give the exact premium and the payment link, ask them to confirm once paid, and offer to answer questions. Clear and helpful, never pushy.

23. 7-day urgency message

Write a WhatsApp message sent 7 days before a policy expires. Context: [client name], [product], expiry [date], premium [amount]. Rules: under 55 words, mention the days left, gently note the risk of a lapse (loss of cover, possible fresh waiting periods on some products), give the payment link, and offer help. No scare tactics, no guaranteed-return claims.

24. 1-day final push

Write a short WhatsApp message sent 1 day before a policy expires. Context: [client name], [product], expires tomorrow, premium [amount], link [link]. Rules: under 45 words, state clearly that it expires tomorrow, make paying easy, and say I am available if they need anything. Respectful and calm.

25. Lapsed-policy win-back

Write a WhatsApp message to a client whose policy lapsed [X] days/weeks ago. Context: [client name], [product], lapsed on [date]. Rules: under 60 words, no blame, gently explain that cover has stopped, offer to check what it takes to restart it (including any fresh waiting period or medical checks), and ask if they want me to help. Warm and non-judgemental.

26. Motor renewal (vehicle + reg no)

Write a WhatsApp motor-insurance renewal reminder. Context: [client name], vehicle [make/model], reg no [reg no], insurer [insurer], expiring [date], premium [amount], link [link]. Rules: under 60 words, mention the vehicle by name, the exact expiry and premium, and the payment link. Remind them that driving uninsured is a legal risk. No pressure.

27. Health renewal (family)

Write a WhatsApp health-insurance renewal reminder for a family policy. Context: [client name], [insurer] family floater, sum insured [amount], expiring [date], premium [amount]. Rules: under 60 words, mention the sum insured and expiry, note that a lapse can mean fresh waiting periods, give the link, and offer a quick cover review. Calm and caring.

28. Maturity or endowment reminder

Write a WhatsApp message telling a client their [endowment / money-back] policy reaches maturity on [date]. Context: [client name], [insurer], maturity value as per policy [amount]. Rules: under 60 words, share the good news, explain the next step (documents or bank details needed), and offer to help with the paperwork. Do not state any figure that is not guaranteed — say ‘as per your policy document’.

29. Premium payment-link message

Write a short WhatsApp message that sends a premium payment link. Context: [client name], [product], amount [amount], due [date], link [link]. Rules: under 40 words, state the amount and due date, share the link, ask them to reply with a screenshot or confirmation once paid, and thank them. Clear and simple.

30. Renewal thank-you + next-year note

Write a warm WhatsApp thank-you to send right after a client renews. Context: [client name], renewed [product] on [date]. Rules: under 45 words, thank them, confirm the policy is active, remind them I am their point of contact for the year, and wish them well. No upsell in this message.

Section 4 · The Quote Follow-Up Sequence

Most sales happen after the fifth touch, not the first

Industry experience is consistent: it takes around five to seven touchpoints to convert a quote. Most advisors give up after one or two. This is a ready six-message sequence spread over 30 days — each one gives the client a reason to reply, and none of them says ‘just following up’.

31. Same-day quote delivery

Write the WhatsApp message I send when I share an insurance quote. Context: [client name], [product], cover [sum insured], premium [amount], key terms [terms]. Rules: under 70 words, say what is attached, highlight two plain facts (not hype), invite questions, and add: ‘Please read the terms and exclusions carefully.’ No guaranteed returns, no ‘best plan’ claim.

32. Day 3 check-in

Write a short WhatsApp follow-up three days after sending a quote. Context: [client name], [product]. Rules: under 40 words, ask if they had a chance to look at it, offer to explain any part in plain language, and end with a question. Friendly, zero pressure, no ‘just following up’.

33. Day 5 — pre-empt the premium objection

Write a WhatsApp message five days after a quote that gently addresses the most common worry: that the premium feels high. Context: [client name], [product], premium [amount]. Rules: under 60 words, acknowledge the cost, offer to look at options (a different cover amount or term), and ask if they want me to run a comparison. Never promise the lowest price.

34. Day 8 — a useful tip, not a chase

Write a WhatsApp message eight days after a quote that gives the client something useful instead of chasing. Context: [client name], interested in [product]. Rules: under 55 words, share one practical tip about that product (for example, why disclosing health history at proposal stage avoids claim trouble later), then a soft line that I am here when they are ready. No pressure.

35. Day 15 — social proof (compliant)

Write a WhatsApp message 15 days after a quote that builds trust with social proof. Context: [client name], [product]. Rules: under 60 words, mention in a general, honest way that I help [X] families in [city] with this product, offer to share a real (anonymised) example if they like, and end with a question. Never guarantee a claim outcome and never invent a case.

36. Day 25 — soft urgency

Write a WhatsApp message 25 days after a quote with gentle, honest urgency. Context: [client name], [product], quote shared [date]. Rules: under 55 words, note that the quote is based on details that can change (age, rates, medical findings), so it is worth deciding soon, and offer to re-check it. No fake deadlines, no ‘last chance today’.

37. Day 30 — ‘closing your file’

Write a final WhatsApp message 30 days after a quote that respects the client's decision. Context: [client name], [product]. Rules: under 55 words, say you will close the file for now to avoid bothering them, remind them they can come back anytime, and wish them well. Polite, no guilt-tripping, and no pressure.

38. 60-day reactivation

Write a WhatsApp message to reactivate a lead who went quiet about 60 days ago. Context: [client name], was interested in [product]. Rules: under 55 words, re-open with something new (a rate change, a new benefit, or a season like the start of the financial year), ask one light question, and make it easy to say yes or no. Warm, not needy.

Section 5 · Objection Handling

Calm, factual answers — no arguing, no pressure

Every advisor hears the same handful of objections. What separates a professional from a pushy seller is the reply: calm, factual, and honest about what insurance can and cannot do. These prompts give you that reply, in your own words.

39. ‘The premium is too high’

A client says the premium is too high. Context: [client name], [product], cover [amount], premium [amount]. Write a calm WhatsApp reply that acknowledges the cost, explains in one honest line what the premium buys, and offers two practical options (a lower cover amount or a different term). Under 70 words. No guilt, no fear, no promise of returns.

40. ‘I will think about it’

A client says ‘I will think about it’. Context: [client name], [product]. Write a short, respectful WhatsApp reply that agrees, asks one clarifying question to understand what they want to think about (price, cover, timing), and offers to send one useful thing to help. Under 55 words. No pressure.

41. ‘My relative or friend is already an agent’

A client says a relative or friend is already their insurance agent. Write a warm, gracious WhatsApp reply that respects that, does not criticise the other agent, offers to be a second opinion for a free cover review, and leaves the door open. Under 60 words. Never disparage a competitor.

42. ‘I will do it next year’

A client says they will buy insurance next year. Write a short WhatsApp reply that respects their timing but honestly notes the trade-off (age and health can change, and some waiting periods restart). Under 60 words. Offer to keep in touch and suggest a no-cost step they can take now. No scare tactics.

43. ‘Returns are lower than FD or mutual funds’

A client compares insurance returns to fixed deposits or mutual funds. Write a factual WhatsApp reply that explains, honestly, that insurance is protection first and that returns on savings plans are not guaranteed the way a bank deposit is. Under 70 words. Never claim or imply guaranteed high returns, and never make an unfair comparison.

44. ‘I already have cover from my office’

A client says their employer already provides insurance. Write a helpful WhatsApp reply that thanks them, explains in one line the common gaps in group cover (it usually ends when the job ends, and the sum insured may be modest), and offers a free review to check. Under 65 words. No pressure, no fear.

45. ‘The bank offered me a better deal’

A client says their bank offered a better deal. Write a calm, professional WhatsApp reply that does not attack the bank, offers to compare the two covers on facts (sum insured, exclusions, claim process), and suggests a short call. Under 65 words. Never claim a lower price, never disparage the bank.

46. ‘I do not trust insurance companies’

A client says they do not trust insurance companies. Write an empathetic WhatsApp reply that acknowledges the feeling, does not argue, offers to explain exactly how a claim works and what to check before buying, and invites them to decide with clear facts. Under 70 words. Calm and non-defensive.

47. ‘There are too many exclusions’

A client worries about too many exclusions in a health policy. Write a helpful WhatsApp reply that agrees exclusions exist, names the two most common ones plainly (waiting periods and pre-existing conditions), offers to walk them through the specific policy's exclusions, and asks a question. Under 70 words. Do not hide or underplay the exclusions.

48. ‘I need to discuss with my spouse’

A client says they must discuss the decision with their spouse. Write a warm WhatsApp reply that respects the decision, offers to prepare a one-page summary they can share, and suggests a time when both can join a short call. Under 55 words. Supportive, no pressure.

Section 6 · Plain-Language Policy Explanation

Explain cover so a first-time buyer actually understands it

Jargon loses sales and causes claims disputes. These prompts turn a policy into clear, honest language your client can understand — including what it does NOT cover. Always check the actual policy wording before you send anything specific.

49. Term insurance explained to a family

Explain term insurance in simple language to a [age]-year-old [salaried / self-employed] client with [dependants]. Cover it in under 150 words: what it is, what it pays and when, why the premium is low, and what it does NOT do (no maturity payout if you outlive the term). Friendly, no jargon. End with a one-line summary the client can repeat to their family.

50. Health insurance explained (waiting period & exclusions)

Explain health insurance to a first-time buyer in simple language. Cover, in under 170 words: what it pays, the meaning of waiting periods and pre-existing conditions, why cashless works only at network hospitals, and what is usually excluded. Do not hide the limitations. End with three questions the buyer should ask before choosing a plan.

51. Motor policy explained

Explain a motor insurance policy in plain language. Cover, in under 150 words: the difference between third-party and comprehensive cover, what no-claim bonus is, what is usually not covered (for example, drink-driving or driving without a valid licence), and why a lapsed policy is risky. Simple, honest English.

52. Endowment or money-back explained (guaranteed vs not)

Explain an endowment or money-back savings plan in simple, honest language. Cover, in under 170 words: how it combines protection and savings, the difference between guaranteed and non-guaranteed benefits, that any illustration is not a promise, and how surrender values usually work. Never state a return as guaranteed unless the policy guarantees it.

53. ULIP explained honestly

Explain a ULIP in plain language, honestly. Cover, in under 170 words: that part of the premium is invested in funds linked to the market, that returns are not guaranteed and can go down, that charges are deducted, and the lock-in period. No return projections, no comparison to fixed deposits without disclosing the risk difference.

54. Riders explained simply

Explain the common insurance riders in one line each, in simple language: critical illness, accidental death benefit, waiver of premium, and hospital cash. For each, say in plain words what it adds and when it helps. Under 150 words total. End with a note that riders cost extra and come with their own terms.

55. The claim process, step by step

Explain the insurance claim process step by step in simple language for a [health / motor / life] policy. Cover: intimation, documents needed, cashless vs reimbursement, typical timelines, and what to do if a claim is delayed. Under 180 words. Note that the exact steps depend on the insurer and policy, so the client should always check the policy document.

56. ‘What your policy does NOT cover’ honest note

Write a short, honest ‘what this policy does not cover’ note for a [health / motor / term] policy. List the most common exclusions in plain one-line points (for example, waiting periods, pre-existing conditions, certain activities). Under 150 words. This is meant to build trust by being straight, not to alarm. End by inviting the client to ask about anything unclear.

Section 7 · Cross-Sell & Needs Analysis

Find the real gap before you talk about a product

Cross-sell only works when it starts from a real need, not a target. These prompts help you find the gap in a family's protection first, then suggest the honest next step — never a product the client does not need.

57. Family protection gap (needs analysis)

Act as an insurance needs-analysis assistant. Ask me [age], [annual income], [dependants], [loans], [existing cover], [savings]. Then suggest a rough protection gap for the family, explain the method in plain words, and recommend the type of cover (not a brand). Keep it under 150 words and remind me to confirm the figures with a proper human review before advising.

58. Health top-up cross-sell

A client already has a basic health policy with a [sum insured] cover. Write a short WhatsApp message explaining, in plain words, what a super top-up is and when it helps, and offering a free review of whether they need one. Under 65 words. No pressure, no ‘you must buy’.

59. Protection + savings, said honestly

Write a short WhatsApp message that explains, honestly, when it makes sense to keep protection (term) and savings (PPF, SIP or an insurance savings plan) separate, and when a bundled plan might suit someone. Under 75 words. Never claim guaranteed high returns and never make an unfair comparison.

60. Child education planning

Write a warm WhatsApp message to a parent, [name], about planning for their child's education. Context: child age [age], goal year [year]. Explain in plain words why starting early helps and suggest a short review of options. Under 70 words. No guaranteed-return promises; say figures depend on the product chosen.

61. Retirement or pension cross-sell

Write a short WhatsApp message to a [age]-year-old client about retirement planning. Context: [name], works as [job]. Explain in plain words why income after retirement needs planning, and offer a free review. Under 70 words. No guaranteed-return claims, no fear about old age.

62. Motor to health cross-sell

A client has only motor insurance with me. Write a short WhatsApp message that, in a natural and non-pushy way, asks whether their family has health cover, and offers a free review. Under 55 words. Do not imply they are wrong for not having it.

63. Shopkeeper or business package

Write a short WhatsApp message to a small shop or business owner, [name], about business insurance (fire, stock, liability). Explain in plain words what such a policy can cover and offer a free review. Under 70 words. No fear tactics, no guaranteed claims.

64. The annual policy review message

Write a WhatsApp message offering an existing client their yearly policy review. Context: [client name], holds [products] with me. Rules: under 60 words, explain the review checks cover against their current life (family, income, loans), ask for a convenient time, and stress it is free and no-obligation.

Section 8 · Claim & Service Support

How you behave at claim time decides your next ten referrals

Claims are where trust is won or lost. These prompts help you guide a client calmly through documents, updates and escalations — and support a family with care when the worst happens.

65. Claim document checklist message

Write a WhatsApp message listing the documents a client needs for a [health / motor / life] claim, in plain language. Format as a short, scannable list. Context: [claim type], [insurer]. End by offering to help gather or check the documents. Under 120 words. Note that the exact list depends on the insurer, so they should confirm with the claim department.

66. Claim status update

Write a short WhatsApp update to a client about their pending claim. Context: [client name], claim for [type], filed [date], current status [status], next step [next step]. Rules: under 60 words, be clear and reassuring, state the next step and when to expect it, and give the insurer's helpline if they need to follow up. Never promise a settlement date or outcome.

67. Cashless hospital help

Write a WhatsApp message guiding a client through a cashless hospital admission. Context: [client name], [insurer] health policy, hospital [name]. Cover: tell the hospital insurance desk early, share the policy and ID, get pre-authorisation, and keep the insurer's helpline handy. Under 110 words, calm and step-by-step. Note that approval depends on the insurer and policy terms.

68. Claim rejected — the grievance ladder

A client's claim was rejected. Write a calm WhatsApp message explaining the next steps in plain language: ask the insurer for the rejection reason in writing, escalate to the insurer's Grievance Redressal Officer, then to IRDAI's Bima Bharosa portal, and then to the Insurance Ombudsman. Under 130 words. Reassuring, factual, no guarantee of a reversal.

69. Death claim — supporting the family (sensitive)

Write a short, gentle WhatsApp message to a nominee after the death of a policyholder, offering condolence and practical help with the claim. Context: [nominee name], policyholder [name], [insurer]. Rules: lead with empathy, keep it brief, list the key documents in one line, and say you will guide them at their pace. Never rush them or mention money as a benefit.

70. Nominee update reminder

Write a short WhatsApp message reminding a client to keep their nominee details up to date. Context: [client name], [product]. Rules: under 55 words, explain in one line why a correct nominee matters, and offer to help update it. No fear, no drama.

71. Policy servicing (address or contact change)

Write a short WhatsApp message helping a client update their address, phone number or bank details on a policy. Context: [client name], [product], change needed [change]. Rules: under 60 words, list the simple steps and the document usually needed, and offer to help. Clear and friendly.

72. Free-look and portability guidance

Write a short WhatsApp message explaining, in plain language, the free-look period and health-insurance portability to a client who is unsure. Rules: under 90 words, say what each means, note the time limits (free-look is usually 30 days; portability should be applied for before renewal), and advise them to check their policy document. No guarantees.

Section 9 · Referrals, Reviews & Personal Brand

Turn good work into your next ten clients

Most of an advisor's best clients come from referrals and a visible, trustworthy presence. These prompts help you ask for referrals without awkwardness, collect reviews, and post content that makes you look like the professional you are.

73. Referral request after a claim

Write a warm WhatsApp message asking for a referral right after helping a client through a claim successfully. Context: [client name], claim for [type] settled. Rules: under 60 words, thank them for their trust, say you are glad it worked out, and ask if they would introduce one person who could use the same help. Never claim a claim is ‘always’ settled.

74. Google review request

Write a short WhatsApp message asking a happy client to leave a Google review. Context: [client name], [product / service]. Rules: under 50 words, thank them, explain in one line that reviews help other families find a trustworthy advisor, and share the review link. Never ask them to exaggerate or mention any guaranteed outcome.

75. A compliant testimonial post

Turn this client feedback into a short social-media testimonial post. Feedback: [paste the client's words]. Rules: keep it under 60 words, keep it honest, do not add any claim the client did not make, and do not imply guaranteed returns or guaranteed claim settlement. Add a line asking people to DM for a free cover review.

76. Three authority posts for WhatsApp Status

Write three short WhatsApp Status posts (each under 25 words) that position me as a knowledgeable insurance advisor. Themes: (1) one common insurance mistake, (2) one quick tip for renewal season, (3) one myth cleared. Educational, no product prices, no guaranteed-return claims, no fear.

77. Instagram or YouTube Short script

Write a 40-second Instagram Reel / YouTube Short script for an insurance advisor. Topic: [topic, e.g. ‘why group health cover from your office is not enough’]. Format: hook (first 3 seconds), three quick points, and a soft call to action. Under 130 words. Educational tone, no guaranteed-return claims, no misleading comparisons.

78. LinkedIn thought-leadership post

Write a short LinkedIn post (under 120 words) for an insurance advisor on [topic, e.g. ‘what families forget when buying health cover’]. Tone: professional and helpful, one clear takeaway, and a soft question at the end to invite comments. No product pitch, no guaranteed-return claims.

79. Birthday or anniversary greeting

Write a warm, short WhatsApp birthday [or policy-anniversary] greeting from an insurance advisor to a client. Context: [client name]. Rules: under 35 words, genuinely warm, mention I am here if they need anything, and stop. No product mention, no offer.

80. A milestone or achievement post

Write a short social-media post celebrating an advisor milestone (for example, helping [X] families this year, or [X] years of service). Rules: under 80 words, grateful and humble tone, thank clients, and end with a line inviting others to reach out for a free review. No guaranteed-return claims, no exaggeration.

Section 10 · Compliance, Admin & Daily System

Stay safe, stay organised, and let AI run the boring parts

This is your back office. Use these prompts to check your own messages against IRDAI's rules, clean up risky wording, plan your day and week, and keep a simple record of every client — all without extra software.

81. The IRDAI-safe ad reviewer

You are an insurance advertising compliance reviewer for India. Review the text I paste against the IRDAI (Insurance Advertisements and Disclosure) Regulations, 2021 and the policyholders' interests rules. Flag: any guaranteed-return or ‘assured’ language, missing ‘insurance is the subject matter of solicitation’ or UIN where relevant, hidden exclusions, unfair comparisons, and any claim of guaranteed approval or settlement. Return a corrected version. Text: [paste your message].

82. De-hype your message (remove risky words)

Rewrite the following message to remove any word or claim that could be treated as misleading for insurance in India. Remove words like ‘guaranteed’, ‘assured’, ‘best’, ‘highest returns’, ‘100% cover’, ‘no rejection’ and any exaggeration. Keep the meaning and warmth. Return the cleaned text and list the words you removed. Message: [paste].

83. Translate to a regional language (compliant)

Translate this message into [language] in the natural, everyday way a local advisor speaks. Keep every fact, number and disclaimer exactly as given, and do not add any promise, guarantee or comparison. Message: [paste].

84. Your daily plan in 10 minutes

Act as my daily planner. I am an insurance advisor. My tasks today: [list your tasks — renewals, follow-ups, meetings, claims]. Build a realistic day plan: mark my top three priorities, slot the renewal reminders and follow-ups around the best contact times (about 9–11 AM and early evening), and suggest what to move to tomorrow. Keep it short and practical.

85. Weekly pipeline review

Help me review my week. My notes: [paste your week — new leads, quotes sent, renewals due, claims pending]. Summarise: what moved forward, what is stuck, and the top five actions for next week. Flag any renewal due in the next 15 days that I have not contacted. Keep it under 150 words and practical.

86. Client record or CRM note

Turn my rough notes after a client call into a clean client record. Notes: [paste rough notes]. Format: client name, contact, products held, key needs, what was discussed, next step and date. Keep it factual, under 100 words, and do not add anything I did not tell you.

87. Objection role-play practice

Act as a sceptical insurance buyer in India. Raise this objection: [paste the objection]. Stay in character and push back twice as I practise my reply. After the role-play, give me one short, honest piece of feedback on what worked and one thing to improve. Never encourage me to exaggerate or promise guaranteed returns.

88. Explain a policy document I upload

I will paste text from an insurance policy document. Explain it in simple language: what is covered, the key exclusions, the waiting periods, the claim steps, and any charges. Do not guess anything that is not in the text — if a detail is missing, say so. Keep it under 200 words. Policy text: [paste].

89. A 30-day content calendar

Create a 30-day WhatsApp Status and social content calendar for an insurance advisor. Give one idea per day across five themes: awareness tips, myth-busters, client questions answered, renewal-season reminders, and personal-brand posts. For each day, give a one-line idea. Educational only — no product prices, no guaranteed-return claims, no fear.

90. Your yearly activity plan

Help me set a simple yearly activity plan as an insurance advisor. My targets: [new clients, renewals, cross-sell]. Break the year into quarters with a focus for each (for example, renewal clean-up, festival-season prospecting, health-insurance season, annual reviews). Keep it under 180 words and practical, with weekly activity numbers I can track.

The Toolbox

Six things to read once, then keep beside you: the prompt formula, the India rules cheat-sheet, a fill-in client brief, the phrases to avoid, a 30-day plan and quick FAQs.

Toolbox 1 · The 5-part prompt formula

Every prompt in this pack is built on these five parts

- Role — Tell the AI who it is: “You are an Indian insurance advisor writing to a client.”
- Facts — Give the real details: name, product, cover, premium, dates. Real facts stop the AI inventing.
- Task — Say exactly what you want: a WhatsApp message, a reply, a checklist, a comparison.
- Rules — Set the boundaries: under 60 words, warm tone, no guaranteed returns, one call to action.
- Format — Say how to shape it: short paragraphs, a bullet list, two versions, or a table.

Toolbox 2 · India rules cheat-sheet

What an insurance advisor must and must not do — verified October 2026

Rules and rates change and vary. Confirm the current position on the IRDAI website before you rely on a specific figure.

Item	What the rule says	Why it matters to you
Who you are	You are an IRDAI-licensed insurance agent / advisor, appointed by an insurer.	Say your name and that you are a licensed advisor in first-touch messages.
Advertising approval	Under the IRDAI (Insurance Advertisements and Disclosure) Regulations, 2021, an agent's advertisement must be approved in writing by the insurer before it is issued (with narrow exceptions for generic, non-product messages).	Get insurer sign-off on any ad, creative or product-specific post before you publish it.
No misleading claims	No guaranteed returns, no ‘assured’ benefits, no claim that approval or settlement is guaranteed, no unfair comparison with other products.	Strip ‘guaranteed’, ‘best’, ‘100% cover’ and ‘no rejection’ from every message and post.
Disclose limitations	Benefits must not be shown without the corresponding exclusions, waiting periods and conditions.	Always add: ‘Please read the policy terms and exclusions carefully.’
Solicitation disclaimer	Life-insurance communications carry the line ‘Insurance is the subject matter of solicitation’ and the product UIN where relevant.	Include it in ads and product creatives, in the same language as the ad.

Item	What the rule says	Why it matters to you
Seller identity (new)	From 1 January 2027, policy documents must name the person who sold the policy (IRDAI Insurance Intermediaries Amendment Regulations, 2026, notified 30 July 2026).	Your sales are now traceable to you — sell clean and document your advice.
WhatsApp: consent	Promotional messages need the customer's prior consent; you must honour a STOP / opt-out request.	Message clients who expect to hear from you; keep your contact list consent-based.
WhatsApp: bulk	Bulk or template messaging is meant for the official WhatsApp Business API, not a personal number.	Use your WhatsApp Business number and approved templates for bulk; never blast from a personal number.
Mis-selling	Mis-selling includes concealing facts, overstating benefits, or not taking reasonable care that the policy suits the customer.	Recommend cover that fits the client's real need, and record why you did.
Rebating	Offering a rebate of commission or premium to win a sale is prohibited under the Insurance Act, 1938.	Never offer cash-back or share commission to win a client.

The simplest safety habit

Before any message or post goes out, ask one question: could a customer read this and expect something the policy does not promise? If yes, rewrite it. That single check prevents almost every mis-selling complaint.

Toolbox 3 · The fill-in client brief

Paste this into your AI before asking for a recommendation

- Name and age: _____
- Family / dependants: _____
- Occupation and city: _____
- Annual income (approx.): _____
- Loans / EMIs: _____
- Existing cover (health / term / motor): _____
- Sum insured already held: _____
- Main worry or goal (health, family, retirement, child): _____
- Budget comfort per year: _____
- Preferred language for messages: _____
- Next step and date: _____

Toolbox 4 · The phrases to avoid

Say the right thing instead — and stay clear of mis-selling

Do not say	Say instead
‘Guaranteed returns’	‘Benefits depend on the plan and are not guaranteed — I will show you the terms.’
‘Best plan in the market’	‘Let us compare a few options against what you actually need.’
‘Claim will definitely be paid’	‘Claims are decided by the insurer as per the policy terms.’
‘100% cover, no exclusions’	‘Here are the cover limits and the exclusions to be aware of.’
‘No rejection, guaranteed approval’	‘Approval depends on underwriting and the information you provide.’
‘Double your money’	‘This plan is savings-linked; returns are not guaranteed.’
‘Better than a fixed deposit’	‘A bank deposit and an insurance plan are different products with different risks.’
‘Everyone is buying this’	‘This suits clients who need [specific need] — is that you?’
‘Pay today or lose the offer’	‘Take your time; here is what changes if you decide later.’
‘Free gift with your policy’	‘There is no gift or rebate — the value is in the cover itself.’
‘Ignore the fine print’	‘Please read the terms and exclusions — ask me anything unclear.’
‘I am the number one advisor’	‘I work with [X] families in [city] — happy to share what I do.’
‘Your current policy is a waste’	‘Let us review what you have and see if there is a real gap.’
‘The other agent is cheating you’	‘Let us compare the covers on facts, not opinions.’
‘This is the last chance’	‘The quote is based on today's details, so it is worth deciding soon.’

Toolbox 5 · The 30-day action plan

A simple first month to put the pack to work

- Days 1–3 — Set up: install or open your WhatsApp Business app, complete your profile, and load your product details and top FAQs. Decide your 9–11 AM contact window.
- Days 4–7 — Renewal clean-up: list every policy expiring in the next 60 days. Send the 30-day and 15-day reminders using Section 3, and tag each client in your list.
- Days 8–12 — Prospecting: pick 30 people you already know. Send the warm-market message (Prompt 1) to ten a day. Log every reply.
- Days 13–16 — First replies: turn on your instant first-reply message (Prompt 11). Reply to every enquiry within minutes during your contact window.
- Days 17–20 — Follow-up: run the quote follow-up sequence (Section 4) on every open quote. Send the day-3 and day-5 messages.
- Days 21–24 — Content: post three authority Status updates and one Reel or LinkedIn post using Section 9. Keep it educational and compliant.
- Days 25–27 — Cross-sell: use Section 7 to find the real gap for ten existing clients and send one honest, needs-based message to each.
- Days 28–30 — Review: run the weekly pipeline review (Prompt 85). Check every message you sent against the cheat-sheet. Plan the next 30 days.

Toolbox 6 · Quick FAQs

The questions advisors ask before they start

Who is this pack for?

Insurance advisors, agents and POSPs in India — whether you work with one insurer or several. It is written for the jobs you do every day: finding leads, replying on WhatsApp, saving renewals, handling objections and staying compliant.

Which AI tool do I need?

Any good AI assistant works — ChatGPT, Gemini, Claude or similar. Copy a prompt, replace the [brackets] with your real client details, and send. No prompt-engineering experience is needed.

Will it sound like AI wrote it?

Not if you paste real facts and give the draft a quick read in your own voice. The prompts are written to sound like a person. The rule throughout is: AI drafts, you verify, you send.

Is this IRDAI-compliant advice?

No. This pack is a drafting and productivity tool, not insurance, legal or tax advice. Every message you send about a specific policy, benefit or claim must be checked against the policy document and IRDAI's rules. Always get your insurer's approval for product-specific advertising.

Are the rules in the Toolbox current?

The Toolbox reflects the position verified in October 2026 — the IRDAI (Insurance Advertisements and Disclosure) Regulations, 2021, and the Insurance Intermediaries Amendment Regulations, 2026. Rules change, so confirm on the IRDAI website before you rely on a specific figure.

How do I download the pack after payment?
After successful payment on Razorpay, you will be redirected to a thank-you page with a download button. Click it to get your PDF instantly — it is yours forever.

Where to go from here

You now hold a full year's worth of messages in one file. Start with the section you need today: renewals due this week? Go to Section 3. A quote going cold? Section 4. A tricky objection? Section 5. Read the Toolbox once, properly, then keep this PDF open beside WhatsApp. AI writes the first draft — you add the judgement, the trust and the relationship. That is the part no AI can replace.
